In the light of all this excitement, it's not surprising that restaurants, bars, stores and individuals are calling from all over the world to place their order for "The World's First Warterless Surf Simulator."

The full scale device is a real surfboard with an amazing sensor build in. The surfboard, via cable, is connected to a computer and into the stand up cabinet with 19" monitor.

• RESULT: The exciting sport of surfing can be moved indoors and played by non-swimmers, suffers, children of all ages, businessmen and women. The ambience and fantasy of surfing in Waikiki, Hawaii is now closer to reality... Even to someone living in Kansas or Ohio.

It's not that easy, however, and at least you don't have to swim for your board (or your life) if you "wipe out." Here's all you have to do: (1) Stand on the board and get your balance. (2) Look at the television screen and decide when you want to tip the board to launch yourself down a 12 foot Waimea wave. (3) Once you drop down the shimmering face you have to turn before you hit the bottom of the wave... and the reef. (4) Watch out for the "Surffers" paddling out. (5) Try to stay within the critical part of the wave. (6) Maneuver into the "Green Room"(tube of the wave) for big points (7) Or run to the nose to give yourself a faster ride by "Hanging 10."

"The First Waterless Surf Simulator." is here to stay and play.
